

CHAPTER 29

Siloti and Eckhof give a joint concert – an epidemic of dinner-luncheon-kaffee-tea-breakfast-and-supper – a supper party of sixteen at the Hofgärtnerei – Liszt shies at “13” and other omens – farewell again to the Master, and the Second Year – Liszt suspends his rule, and gives a testimonial. 281

CHAPTER 30

Carl Filtsch, an earlier prodigy pupil who perished in the bud – Liszt’s vast productiveness – rare unpublished autograph letters – the author’s Wagner-Liszt collection. 287

CHAPTER 31

D’Albert still the sensation – symphonies with one’s meals – American feminine violinists – Scharwenka and other sedates in high jinks – Christus in Leipzig – the Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikverein in Weimar. 295

PART III: May-July, 1883

CHAPTER 32

Plate 2: April 21, 1882: "This morning Mr. G. came and we went to Liszt . . ." [Series 2, folder 4, p. 9.]	22
Plate 3: April 22, 1882: "This afternoon I had my first lesson of Liszt. There were ten pupils present . . ." [Series 2, folder 4, p. 15.] Paraphrased by Lachmund on p. 11.	40
Plate 4: "Pietro Mascagni" and "Edward MacDowell" from Carl Lachmund's autograph book.	64
Plate 5: June 1, 1882: "Today I played the difficult Valse-Etude by Saint-Saëns to the Master . . ." [Series 2, folder 5, p. 87.] Paraphrased by Lachmund on p. 70.	74
Plate 6: June 9, 1882: "Again we saw Liszt get angry—more so than ever before." [Series 2, folder 5, p. 99.] Paraphrased by Lachmund on p. 72.	94
Plate 7: June 25, 1882: "This afternoon the Misses Stahrs gave another 'Musical' at their home." [Series 2, folder 5, p. 123.] Paraphrased by Lachmund on p. 78.	104
Plate 8: September 4, 1883: "Frl. Oleson [sic] today played Schumann's Novellette in F , op. 21" [Series 2, folder 8, p. 608.] Paraphrased by Lachmund on p. 252.	144
Plate 9: "Moritz Moszkowski" and "Eugène d'Albert" from Carl Lachmund's autograph book.	166
Plate 10: "Max Bruch," "Felix Weingartner" and "Ferruccio Busoni" from Carl Lachmund's autograph book.	176
Plate 11: "Moriz Rosenthal," "Xaver Scharwenka" and "Vladimir Pachmann" from Carl Lachmund's autograph book	188